

The upcoming rules change in order to allow greater media consolidation is a great threat not only to diversity and consumer rights but to the very democracy that the United States enjoys. The courts should never have held the rules to be illegal since they violate the ultimate source of law in America the Constitution. In order to allow freedom of the press and free speech the public must have multiple and diverse sources of information, the ability to find news and information in alternative sources (such as the internet) is no excuse to allow large media companies to consolidate since most of information found on these sources comes directly from mainstream media sources such as newspapers and television. Therefore such rules should not be removed.
